

Worth thinking about...

Lyn and I are almost at the end of our time away this summer. Once again, we've been in France. This year, we had the pleasure of having our daughter, son-in-law, and new (first) grandchild with us for two of the weeks. Yesterday, I was making a grocery run and decided to turn on French radio. It was a talk-show, and they were talking about finances...materialism...sort of Keeping-up-with-the-Jones's. They used a term I hadn't heard before:

Financial Dysmorphia

Since I hadn't heard it before, I did what all of us do, right? ☺ I Google'd it. I had thought maybe it was just some term the French used. I stumbled across an article. I found it to be worthwhile reading. Here's the link:

<https://www.thegoodtrade.com/features/money-dysmorphia/>

Take time to read it. Ponder it. Discuss it with your partner, family, close friend. I think you'll be glad you did.